All was quiet in the museum as night fell and the doors were locked. As the lights dimmed, a strange rumbling could then be heard through the empty corridors. One of the skeletons, which had two tusks, was no longer on its stand! Before long, none of the skeletons were on their stands. In fact, they had completely disappeared from the room. The night guard, asleep in his chair, was oblivious to the changes that were happening in the museum. There was a bang and the night guard woke with a start! That was when he heard stomping heading in his direction... He couldn't believe his eyes! The dinosaur skeleton was walking towards him.
