As Aron dove into the depths of the ocean, something caught his eye and it wasn't a fish! A brown chest rested on the ocean floor where it had obviously been for some time. It must be from a nearby shipwreck or been flung overboard when a ship had been in trouble. Aron, who had always dreamed of finding hidden treasure, was desperate to find out what was inside.

After he reached it, he began to pull on it – trying his best to heave it out of the sand. Eventually, it came free and he swam with it back to the surface and hauled it onto his boat. The chest, which was fragile due to its age, opened easily now it was out of the water. Shocked at its contents, Aron knew he would never forget the day he made this monumental discovery.
